MILITARY MANCEUVRES IN THE THAMES VALLEY YESTERDAY.

In the Thames Valley around Henley a fierce war is being waged between two great invading armies and General French's defending force of 30,000 men. The invaders effected a successful imaginary landing at Liverpool and on the Humber, and marched down to join forces and attack London. But the small army of defenders defeated this object. The mimic warfare is admirably presented in the above snapshosts, showing—(1) after stilling camp, packing, kits; (2) loading a transport wagen; (3) cleaning a big gun; (4) at work upon the searchlight motor-car; and (5) infantry marching out of camp.

What Half-a-Crown Will Do

Lloyd's offers 200,000 complete Libraries and 200,000 specially designed Oak Bookcases for 2/6 down and 5/- a month as an advertisement for "Lloyd's Weekly News" in 200,000 homes.

A few of the first 20,000

The library selected for this purpose was the "International Library," which already graces 20,000 homes, including those of and distinguished members of both Houses, the Church, the Bar, the Navy and Army, and eminent people in the world of Art, Science, and Letters, etc.

What it does for you

The "International Library" does what you would do for yourself if you had time to wade through thousands of volumes. It takes the best, and gives only those interesting, fascinating stories, poems, essays, novels, histories, biographies, plays, etc., etc., in which the great authors are at their greatest, and in their most entertaining and delightful moods. The board of distinguished editors comprises the greatest English, French, German, and American literary experts of the age.

An Instantaneous Success

Our first offer was to sell 100,000 Libraries and 100,000 Bookcases for 2s. 6d. down and 5s. a month, but the response was so enormous it became evident that 100,000 libraries would not be sufficient for LLOYD'S readers alone, and our aim was to rea new readers. So we were induced to increase the offer to 200,000 libraries and 200,000 bookcases.

Largest ever known

This is more than double the next greatest sale of books that the world has ever known. It is fitting that LLOYD'S WEEKLY NEWS, which has more readers than any other publication in the whole world, should undertake it. We could only do it in one way.

How the price is possible

The price had to be cut right down and the terms of sale made to meet the possibilities of a small income. The vast size of the undertaking made possible great savings by wholesale manufacturing (and that without cheapening the quality of paper, printing, or binding). Then, too, the 20,000 sets already sold have paid for the enormous cost of editors, engravers, type-setting, plates, etc. Besides which there are no middlemen's profits, and last, but by no means least, we are doing this to advertise LLOYD'S NEWS and not for a profit on the books. There is no advertisement on the books or on the fumed oak bookcase, but we believe that in every home they enter they will attract favourable attention and give us more advertising and more new readers than 100,000 big and costly posters on the hoardings. Altogether we are able to make the most extraordinary offer ever known.

20 Sumptuous Volumes.

The twenty sumptuous volumes are precisely the same in quality of printing, binding, and paper as the 20,000 sets already sold to prominent people. Each volume contains 500 pages, 10,000 pages in all. They are beautifully printed on first-class book FREE paper, the type being large, bold, and clear, and most grateful to the eye. You pay only 2/6 down, and the twenty big sumptuous volumes and the specially designed handsome fumed oak bookcase are sent, carriage paid, to your home in London, or your railway station in the country; and you have nothing more to pay until the books and bookcase have been in your home for a whole month. After one clear month you commence paying 5,- a month for a few months until the Library is paid for.

Fascinating interest

The 10,000 large pages contain only reading of burning interest that never fails to excite and enthral the attention. We can tread the paths of wisdom in the company of Socrates or Solon; visit the grim underworld with Milton, Virgil, or Dante; turn the searchlight of Sheridan or Molière on the world's foibles; spend a rollicking evening in the delightful company of Fielding or Smollett; enjoy a refreshing hour or two in primeval forests with Wordsworth or Longfellow; join in the breezy infectious laughter of Douglas Jerrold or Mark Twain. We can thread the streets and alleys of old London with Defoe, Ainsworth, or Pepys; revel in history with Froude, Mommsen, Gibbon, or Curtius; hear the thunder of oratory of Demosthenes or Cicero, Burke or John Bright. We can be thrilled with weird stories by Conan Doyle, Hoffman, or Poe, or scour the Spanish Main with Clark Russell or Marryat.

500 full Page Pictures

There are some 500 illustrations, too, each occupying a page by itself, consisting of historical battlefields, homes of great authors, illustrious people of bygone ages, reproductions of rare pictures illustrating the manners and customs of other lands and other times. While pictures entertain every member of the family and serve to heighten the interest in reading, they especially attract the younger folks and awaken a taste for good reading.

The Scope of the Library

Large as is the library with its 20 big beautiful volumes of 10,000 large pages, the editors have not found room for one uninteresting page. Of course, the English authors are most widely represented. From Chaucer and Spenser to Marlowe, Jonson, Herrick, Dryden, Evelyn, Izaak Walton, Pope, Sheridan, Kingsley, Bulwer Lytton, Macaulay, Stevenson, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Miss Yonge, Zangwill, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, Bret Harte, Kipling, Hall Caine, Jerome, and many, many more. The great foreign authors, European, Asiatic, African, and American, from Ancient times down to to-day, are also fully represented. Everything translated by able scholars into perfect English. In all, there are some thousand authors, providing reading for every member of the family, of every age, and of every taste.

Decide at once if you want early delivery

At the rate the libraries are being sold, only the promptest of the prompt can hope for early delivery. Orders are filled in rotation, first come, first served; and delay in ordering may mean weeks of waiting, therefore, if you wish to make sure of a library, send at once (a postcard will do) for the descriptive booklet and specimen pages sent post free.

OUR NEW TREATY WITH JAPAN. Clever Strategic Movement at the Terms of New Alliance Published Last Night.

TEN YEARS COMPACT.

How Our Indian Frontier Safeguarded.

The text of the agreement between the United Kingdom and Japan, which was signed in London on August 12 last, was issued last evening, together with a dispatch to his Majesty's Ambassador at St. Petersburg forwarding a copy of the agreement with instructions to communicate it to the Russian Government at the earliest opportunity.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

The following is the full text of the agreement :-

The following is the full text of the agreement:—
Preamble: The Governments of Great Britain shad Japan, being desirous of replacing the agreement concluded between them on January 30, 1902, by fresh stipulations, have agreed upon the following articles, which have for their object:—
(a) The consolidation and maintenance of the general peace in the regions of Eastern Asia and India.
(b) The preservation of the common interests of all Powers in China, by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese Empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China.
(c) The maintainance of the territorial rights of the high contracting parties in the regions of Eastern Asia and of India, and the defence of their special interests in the said regions.

Article 1—It is agreed that whenever, in the Article 1—It is agreed that whenever, in the opinion of either Great Britain or Japan, any of the rights and interests referred to in the preamble of this agreement are in jeopardy, the two Governments will communicate with one another fully and frankly, and will consider any common measures which should be taken to safeguard those menaced rights or interests.

rights or interests.

Article 2—If, by reason of unprovoked attack or aggressive action, whether arising on the part of any other Power or Powers, either contracting party should be involved in war in defence of its territorial rights or special interests mentioned in the preamble of this agreement, the other contracting party will at once come to the assistance of its ally and will conduct the war in common, and make peace in mutual agreement with it.

KOREA AND INDIA.

Article 3—Japan possessing paramount political, military, and economic interests in Korea, Great Britain recognises the right of Japan to take such measures of guidance, control, and protection in Korea as she may deem proper and necessary to safeguard and advance those interests, provided always that such measures are not contrary to the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations.

and industry of all nations.

Article 4—Great Britain having a special interest in all that concerns the security of the Indian frontier, Japan recognises her right to take such measures in the proximity of that frontier as she may find necessary for safeguarding her Indian December 1.

possessions.

This article would permit of the employment of Japanese troops if the necessity arose.

Article 5—The high contracting parties agree that neither of them will, without consuting the other, enter into separate arrangements with another Power, to the prejudice of the objects described in the preamble of this agreement.

Article 6-As regards the présent war between Japan and Russia, Great Britain will continue to maintain strict neutrality, unless some other Power or Powers should join in hostilities against Japan, in which case Great Britain will come to the assistance of Japan, and will conduct the war in common, and make peace in mutual agreement with Japan.

COUNCILS OF WAR.

'Article 7—The conditions under which armed assistance shall be afforded by either Power to the other in the circumstances mentioned in the present agreement, and the means by which such assistance is to be made available, will be arranged by the naval and military authorities of the contracting parties, who will from time to time consult one another fully and freely upon all questions of available in the contracting parties, who will from time to time consult one another fully and freely upon all questions of mutual interest.

Article 8.—The present agreement shall, subject to the provisions of Article 6, come into effect im-mediately after the date of its signature, and re-main in force for ten years from that date.

In his dispatch to the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, Lord Lansdowne says: "The Russian Government will, I trust, recognise that the new agreement is an international instrument to which no exception can be taken by any of the Powers interested in the affairs of the Far East?"

FORDING THE THAMES DUCHESS OF

Army Manœuvres.

BIVOUAC IN THE RAIN.

Rain-soaked, but cheerful, the men engaged in the manœuvres in the Thames Valley bivouacked last night at Cookham, Hurley, and Henley.

For the past two days they have had an uncom fortable time, and it says much for their general hardihood and moral that they began yesterday's movements in such excellent spirits after having arrived in the flooded camp lines wet to the sin late the preceding night.

It will be borne in mind that England is supposed

It will be borne in mind that England is supposed to have lost command of the sea, and that an immense army of invaders, moving in three great bodies, are menacing the country.

One army has seized the industrial centres in the north; another is speeding towards the metropolis; and the third is engaged in attempting to hold up the 30,000 defenders, who have the double duty of stopping the London-bound force and of fighting the third army.

MILES OF TRENCHES.

Wiles of Trenches.

Vesterday some movements were cleverly executed in pursuance of General French's scheme of drawing the opposing force—the second army—further south and away from their desired object, the investment of London.

To bring this about, the miles of splendidly-dug trenches on the Chiltern Hills were filled up and a strategic retreat commenced, the defenders moving south to the Thames Valley between Henley and Cookham.

Every-road leading to the Thames was used for the retirement, the slower moving troops, such as artillery and transport, being placed in the centre, while the cavalry and mounted infantry covered the movement by holding the crests of the Chilterns.

The 1st Division quickly crossed the river by a pontoon bridge at Little Marlow, the 2nd and 3rd Divisions also crossing by pontoon at Medmenham.

The men were cleverly handled, the passage only occupying an hour. After drawing the invaders onwards, the troops bivonacked as darkness fell.

has produced some interesting novelties in the way of toys, both for children and grown people. The-first toy, which attracted my attention is called "The Mysterious Ball." This rolls up a spiral platform, and, at the top, falls open, displaying a clown who makes his bow and waves a flag.

"The Billiard Match" is a toy in which two gentlemen are engaged in playing an exciting billiard match on a French billiard-table.

Perhaps the most curious toy of the show is "The Eclipse." The sun is a large, round illuminated lantern; the earth is represented by a small ball, and the moon by another ball.

An ingenious system of strings causes earth and moon to revolve round the sun until the moon passes between the sun and the earth, and an eclipse is caused.

MOTORIST POLICE CORPS.

LORD ROSEBERY AFRAID.

Invited to America, but Dare Not Face the Interviewer.

PRESIDENT INVOKED.

Mr. Roosevelt Will Try To Conquer the Earl's Fears.

Everybody in America, from President Roosevelt downwards, is trying to get Lord Rosebery to visit

But Lord Rosebery will not go; he is afraid.

But Lord Rosebery will not go; he is afraid.

Not that he fears sea-sickness, for he is a good sailor. Nor has he any prejudice against America. On the contrary, his admiration for the Great Republic is well-known, and a year or two ago he pointed out that, but for a stupid mistake of George III., the two countries might still be under the same flag, with a joint capital at Washington. That speech made Lord Rosebery quite a popular idol in America, where his genius is perhaps even more admired than at home.

The New England Society has set the seal on this cordial feeling by inviting Lord Rosebery to be the chief guest at its annual dinner. This is no light distinction, even for a millionaire Earl, for the society is the most influential patriotic organisation in the States, and only the most eminent of America's public men can hope to be honoured with such an invitation.

FEARS THE INTERVIEWER.

Lord Rosebery would be charmed to go, but fears the American newspaper man. Visions of that enterprising person crossed his mind when the finitivitation came, and he at once shrank from the invitation came, and he at once shrank from the ordeal.

Then the American Ambassador was asked to use his influence. Lord Rosebery listened to arguments poured forth with more than ordinary ambassadorial cordiality; he hesitated, was almost conquered—and then decided not to go.

It was M.-Wittle's fatt that decided him. Lord Rosebery, unlike Mr. Balfour, reads the newspapers. He read how M. Witte was treated by the American newspaper men—how they described his clothes, dwelt lovingly on the size of his feet, invented epigrams and strange oaths for him, followed him to his bath, and lay in wait for him as he went to bed.

Lord Rosebery considered. "If they do this to a Russian ex-Minister of the Interior"—such was the tenor of his reflections—"what will they do to an ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain?"

REPORTERS EVERYWHERE.

REPORTERS EVERYWHERE.

Lord Rosebery's imagination ran on till he saw reporters as a Chinaman sees dragons and demons in an opium dream. He saw them disguised as coachmen, chauffeurs, generals, barbers, waiters. He saw them waiting on his hotel door-steps; concealed in the wardrobe in his bedroom; coming down the chimney at two o'clock in the morning to ask his opinion on an entente with the United States. He may even have dreamed of finding 4 small specimen of the genus concealed in his boots, as a dweller in the tropics finds a snake. The terrifying prospect was too much for a British peer, far too wealthy, even if he were still unmarried, to sigh for the golden charms of an American bride. Lord Rosebery declined.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S NEW PROBLEM.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S NEW PROBLEM.

Now President Roosevelt is to be asked to urge Lord Rosebery to accept the invitation. This pressure will not come from the President in his official capacity. It will be simply from one literary man to another.

The author of "The Last Phase" could hardly resist such an appeal from the author of "The Strenuous Life."

If Lord Rosebery accepts the President's invitation it is understood that he will make several speeches instead of one. A tour including the larger cities would be arranged for a series of speeches with the view of strengthening the AngloAmerican entente.

American entente.

To protect Lord Rosebery from the terrible newspaper man it has been suggested that recourse should be had to the principle of 'Set a thief to

At any rate, it is confidently expected that President Roosevelt will be able to induce Lord Rosebery to take the trip, and thus give a great fillip to the cause of the Anglo-American entente.

Police on the Track of a Suspected Man.

INQUEST EVIDENCE.

Discovery of Finger-Marks Strengthens Murder Theory.

All the evidence forthcoming since the discovery of a young woman's body in the railway tunnel near Redhill supports the idea that she was the victim of a brutal crime

In the small hours of yesterday morning Mr. R. E. Money, a dairyman, of Kingston-on-Thames, identified the mutilated body lying at the Feathers Hotel, Merstham, as that of his sister, Miss Mary Sophia Money such lived with fire employers.

The dead girl, who was only twenty-two year of age, had been employed for the last fifteen months as bookkeeper at Messrs. Bridgers, dairy-men, 245, Lavender-hill, Clapham Junction, and she lived with her employers.

Soon after seven o'clock on Sunday evening she left the house, saying she was going out for a stroll and would be back shortly. She was last seen by the shopwoman at a confectioner's shop near the entrance to Clapham Junction Station. After buying some sweets there she went towards the existin.

Identified Through Laundry Mark

Identified Through Laundry Mark.

From that time there is at present no clue to hes movements. She did not return that night, and in the morning Mr. Bridger wired to her friends and relatives for news of her.

Mr. Moncy, her brother, received one of these telegrams at Kingston, and a few hours later he saw a newspaper report which stated that the laundry number on the clothes of the dead woman was 245. Knowing that this was the mark op his sister's clothes, he jumped to the conclusion that she had been killed.

He at once went to Merstham. The hat he recognised as his sister's. He thought he knew the rings as hers, so he telephoned to Mr. Bridger to find that the "R?" from the "Mizpah?" ring was missing. Then, and only then, did he feel absolutely certain it was his sister's body. It was too mutilated for him to recognise it.

"I am convinced that my poor sister has been the victim of foul play," said the heart-broken brother. "I cannot believe she could have committed suicide."

And all the known facts seem to support his belief. Miss Money, generally known somens.

mitted sucide."

And all the known facts seem to support his belief. Miss Money, generally known among her friends as "Polly," was a bright, happy, good-looking girl, apparently without a care in the world.

Facts Supporting Murder Theory.

Facts Supporting Murder Theory.

She naturally had admirers, and was known to have sent postcards to some, but there was no hint of anything serious in their relations. Her boxes have been examined, but no trace of correspondence with any person unknown to her family has been found.

Other points in favour of the murder theory, apart from the veil found stuffed into the dead woman's wooth acre.

She took a knitted purse containing money with her, which has not been found. Her handkerchief is missing, as is also her petticoat.

Her pocket has been torn from her dress.

Marks have been found near the mouth, possibly made by a thumb-nail or the ferrile of a stick, which might have been caused while the veil was pushed into the mouth.

Finger-Marks on the Arm.

Finger-marks have been found on her arm, such as might have been caused in a struggle. On the other hand, some points suggest that the dead girl may have had an appointment with some unknown person which she wished to keep secret. She is said to have told her friend at Mr. Bridger's that she was only going for a stroll and would be back soon. But she told the sweetstiff seller at Clapham Junction that she was going on to Victoria.

to Victoria.

When a girl friend offered to accompany her on that "stroll" which had such a tragic ending Miss Money discouraged her, and she was seen on the Sunday afternoon looking up an "ABC" timetable. There can be little doubt also that she entered the train of her own free will, and it is unlikely that she got into it by mistake under the impression that it was one which would go to Kingston, as she had been to see her brother there before.

she had been to see her brother there before. Some significance may also be attached to the remark she made to a friend on the day she met with her death that "she should like a motor-cloak to go with her veil and gloves."

There are three trains which Miss Money might have been in: the 9.10 from Victoria to Redbill; the 9.35 from Charing Gross to Redbill; and the ten e'clock from London Bridge to Reading, calling at and labelled, "Thank God for the rain."

Redhill. She would have had plenty of time to catch any of these trains from town if she had taken a train up from Clapham Junction soon after seven o'clock.

EVIDENCE AT THE INQUEST.

The inquest was opened at the Feathers Hotel, Merstham, yesterday afternoon by Mr. Nightingale, the deputy-coroner. Robert Henry Money identified the deceased as, his sister, and said he could give no explanation how she came to Merst ham.

She was of a bright and jolly disposition. She did not know Merstham, and he was not aware that she had ever been in the district before. He believed that once she went to Brighton, and only a short time ago she went to Hastings.

Emma Holm, who was employed by the deceased's master, said on Sunday evening Money left her about seven o'clock. She seemed bright and in good spirits. Miss Money had never spoken to her about any trouble, and she was not in the habit of going out on Sundays except to her friends. Witness noticed that when Miss Money left on Sunday night, she had a small knitted purse, which habit of going out on Sundays except to ner rincus. Wincess noticed that when Miss Money left on Sunday night she had a small knitted purse, which was rather full of money. She never hinted that she would take her life. She had no gentleman acquaintance that she was aware of.

Mr. Money was recalled, and said that a young man named Butlet and a man named Bellchambers used to correspond with his sister.

Miss Frances Gelding, confectioner, of Clapham Junction, stated that Miss Money called at her shop on Sunday night and purchased some chocolate, and said that she was going on to Victoria. She had no man waiting outside.

Dr. Crickett described the injuries and stated that the right wrist was bruised and the roof of the mouth was lacerated, and it might have been done by a finger-nail or the ferrule of a stick. The injuries to the mouth gave him the idea that an attempt had been made to push something into the mouth.

mouth.

The inquest was then adjourned till Monday

SEEN WITH A MAN

It was stated last night that the police were seeking a man who was seen to enter the train at Victoria with a young woman, who answers the description of Miss Money.

MR. TREE MOVING.

Manager Explains His Sudden Clos-Ing of His Majesty's Theatre.

COSTLY PRECAUTION.

Mr. Reerbohm Tree, who had surprised his audience on the previous night by announcing that His Majesty's Theatre would be closed for some weeks, yesterday explained the situation to the Daily Mirror

"It was at 2 p.m. yesterday afternoon," he said, "that I learnt from my engineer that there was a defect in the arch of the proscenium. I at once communicated with the London County Council, and I decided that I owed it to the public to close the theatre that night, though the London County Council were prepared to allow me a week.

"I immediately began looking for another theatre, and I learned that I had secured the Waldorf Theatre just as I walked on to the stage to make by speech after last night's performance.

"Of course, the moving of scenery in such "Of course, the moving of scenery in such a hurry is a great undertaking, and I fear that the whole thing will cost me thousands. Mr. A. Collins, the moment he heard of my misfortune, placed the staff of the Druy Lane Theatre at my disposal. "We started moving the scenery at four o'elock this morning, and thanks to the loyal efforts of my entire staff we shall be able to produce 'Oliver Twist' in its entirety to-night."

Cause of the Trouble.

Mr. Tree thinks the cracking of the arch is due-either to the undermining for the Tube railway or to the recent additions to the theatre. Mr. Dana, Mr. Tree's manager, said he feared that the alterations would take some six or seven-weeks, and that, as another production was booked to appear at the Waldorf Theatre on October 12, negotiations were being made for another theatre for "Oliver Twist."

for "Oliver Twist."

A well-known architect pointed out that a crack in the arch of the proscenium probably indicated a scrious defect in the building.

The bending of a girder was the most likely cause, and if this was not remedied it might eventually lead to the collapse of the building.

trouble of coming to Rangoon for nothing."

The reason is this. They believe he is coming to Burma, says a correspondent, to settle what to them is a very big question.

Some time ago the daughter of a wealthy merchant in Rangoon eloped with a young Burmese lad, and, said the leadman of a village through which they passed, the merchant, who is a great friend of his Majestry telegraphed to London.

As a result the King is to send his eldest son to Burma to try the case, but the old headman is anxious because the missing couple cannot be found.

"POLITE BLACKMAIL."

Solicitor's Criticism of Serious Charge Against a Merchant.

The police notified to the Bow-street magistrate esterday that the Natal authorities desired to withdraw the warrant issued against William Weaver, produce merchant, of Durban, on a charge, under the Fugitive Offenders Act, of fraudulent insolvency on Natul.

On behalf of Mr. Weaver, Mr. Harry Wilson Said he was a man of excellent repute in this country and in the Colonies. He had had a dispute with a man, who took proceedings in the Natal Courts, and the matter was referred to arbitration.

After he (Mr. Weaver) had come to England, judgment for 2625 was obtained against him in some peculiar manner and a warrant was issued. What had taken place was nothing more or less than a system of collecting debts by polite blackmail. To save trouble Mr. Weaver had remitted 2000 to Natal, which had been accepted, as against the 2625, but had given notice of his desire to appeal.

Declining to express an opinion on the case, the magistrate discharged accused.

NEWEST RACECOURSE.

Newbury Excites Experts' Admiration on the Inaugural Day.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWBURY, Tuesday .- Millions of money are invested in racing pursuits in England, and the latest venture, Newbury, inaugurated this afternoon, involves a sum probably not less than a quarter of a million

It has made a brilliant start, and the thousands of persons visiting the beautiful course were loud in its praise

It seemed fitting that to Lord Carnaryon, a local magnate, and one of the chief supporters of the meeting, should fall the honour of winning the chief prize, the Inaugural Handicap of 1,600 sovs., with Missovaja, a fally whose name, however, had hither to been linked with ill-success.

No fewer than 15,000 persons paid for admission to-day. The number of club members is about 600, and from this source an income of some £8,000 a year is secured. It seemed fitting that to Lord Carnarvon, a local to-day. The number of club members is about 600, and from this source an income of some 28,000 a year is secured. Newbury is beyond all question the prettiest club course in England. The mere track is one of the best, with its straight mile, slightly undulating, and the longer: courses sweeping round with gentle curves, the whole circuit well within yiew of the spectators on the stands, and all the enclosed spaces. It was interesting to hear the opinions of the moneyed experis and the travellers who were present. "Here," said an American acquainted with racing resorts in both hemispheres, "is the prettiest place I have ever seen."

A French visitor was good enough to say that "Newbury more nearly approaches the perfection of Longchamps or Chantilly in natural heauty and complete outlit, in every detail, than any other English course."

In one vital matter the enterprise beats anything known in France. The Great Western Railway, at very cheap rates, conveys passengers from Paddington to the course, a distance of fifty-three miles, in as many minutes.

CHARGE AGAINST MR. HUGH WATT.

Sir Reginald Beauchamp Called as a Witness.

SHUTTLE'S ADMISSIONS.

The most interesting figure at Marlborough-street Police Court, yesterday, when Mr. Kennedy re sumed his investigation of charges against Mr. Hugh Watt, ex-M.P., of conspiring to murder his former wife, was Sir Reginald Beauchamp, the former husband of the defendant's present wife.

In answer to Mr. Sims, who appeared for the rosecution, the baronet stated that he resided at Langley Park, near Norwich.

Mr. Sims: You were husband of Lady Violet
Beauchamp?—Yes.
From whom you obtained a decree of dissolution of marriage on account of her misconduct with the defendant Watt?—Yes.
When in London he (Sir Reginald) stayed at Hillstreet, Berkeley-square. He was a member of the Carlton Club, where he generally lunched when in town. He usually returned home from the club in town. He usually returned home from the club between half-past six and half-past seven. He kept's diarry, and, under the date October 27, 1992, he found he went to Fillistreet and remained there until the 31st. He was there also from November 1 to 19, and from December 4 to 9, when he went to a nursing home. In January he went abroad, and stayed some time in Algiers.

Mr., Muir: The divorce suit you brought was undefended.—No, certainly not.

Did the respondent go into the witness-box?—No.

Nor the co-respondent?-No.

"Lot of Law Costs."

That's what we call undefended.—Well (in dubious tone), I didn't know. I know there we a lot of law costs.

Did you suggest to Mr. Wats they a lot of law costs.

Did you suggest to Mr. Wakt that he should settle £850 on Lady Violet?—My lawyer did, and the settlement was effected. Since that time I have had absolutely nothing to do with Mr. Watt.

The man Shuttle, who gave remarkable evidence at the previous hearing, was again called, and at once was questioned as to a conversation he had with Mr. Watt in Hyde Park, when that gentleman, he alleged, asked him to chloroform Mrs. Watt.

"He was going to give me £100 when the job was done," observed Shuttle, who said that on a later occasion he told Mr. Watt that Mrs. Watt had gone to Harrogate.

What did Mr. Watt say to that?—He said "You had better go there at once."

"To Murder Her'

For what purpose?—To murder her. Mr. Watt then said "I will go and get you some money. You wait here till Leome back." He went away, and when he came back he gave me .86, telling me to go to Harrogate at once. He said "I shall be waiting between Stanhope Gate and Wellington House every night at six o'clock until you come back."

back."

Shuttle said he then met another man named Harrey. They went and bought new overcoats, afterwards visiting the Tivoli.

He did not go to Harrogate, but next day had an interview with Mrs. Watt, who, all the time, was at 15, Chaple-street.

He and Harvey on the following day went to the office of Mrs. Watt's solicitors in Norfolk-street, made a statement, and were each rewarded with helf a covergion.

Detective in Waiting.

Detective-sergeant Cannon, stationed at Geraldrow Police Station, Pimlico, deposed to going to Mrs. Watt's house in January, 1905. While waiting in the dining-toom he saw Shuttle arrive.

Shuttle was taken to a room on the first floor and he (the sergeant) afterwards went to the door of that room, from where he head what Shuttle was saying to Mrs. Watt. Subsequently witness entered the room and spoke to Shuttle, who afterwards went with him to the Geraldrow Police Station, where a statement which he made was taken down by Inspector Hayter and signed by Shuttle.

Mr. Muir: Shuttle visited Mrs. Watt at her st. He did not ask for money, and none was Windsor Guardians have a grievance.

After being ejected with much trouble, he was kept in the local workhouse as insane, but on a or certifying that he was not, the guardians sought at their meeting yesterday to recover the expenses incurred.

This was found impossible, because, as it was pointed out, the man had behaved as a lunatic and acted in such a manner that he had to be taken in

"As so many lunatics visit Windsor Castle in the course of a year," said a guardian, "it is rather hard on the ratepayers to be saddled with the subsequent cost."

The guardians naturally are indignant, and they are to discuss ways and means whereby they can save the ratepayers expense from this reason in the "Changing Inshands is a somewhat common practice in Sheffield among a certain class of people."

This surprising statement was made by Mr. Wilson, a Sheffield solicitor engaged in a case of which this strange practice formed a feature. In this case Louisa Ryalls, a widow, and Florence Williams, married, were charged with assaulting Rose Metcalfe, another married woman.

When cross-examined Mrs. Metcalfe admitted that she had "changed husbands" with the defendant Ryall's daughter, and something about this transaction had apparently annoyed Mrs. Ryalls. But Mrs. Metcalfe said that the two husbands had exchanged wives and lived with them for some time. Since then Mr. Metcalfe had returned to her, and they were better friends than ever.

"I then made my way to Penylaw Hill. (Heathfield here describes the story, already published; of meeting with boys and sending a message to put the police off the track.) I slept that night on a-hayrick in a convent garden.

"All Wednesday was spent wandering about the woods, cold and hungry. At night I made my way to Newport, where I got a job. Daily I went to the library to credit the latest news. MATINEE PROBLEM.

Should Women Be Required To Remove Their Headgear?

Before long there may be no such thing as a matipée performance at theatres.

At one time it was thought that the matinée hat difficulty had been solved, but now comes the prosouncement that matinées are going out of fashion, and all through the matinée hat.

Finding argument and persuasion uscless, men have resorted to the drastic expedient of boycotting the matinée absorber.

have resorted to the drastic expedient of boycotting the matinée altogether.

A fheatrical manager told the Daily Mirror yesterday that either one of two things must happen—either morning performances will have to be abolished, or else ladies will have to be prohibited from entering the theatre with their hats on.

"Men are the best patrons of the drama," said the manager, "and if we lose them through the matinée hat, we shall lose the best part of our visitors.

A sum of 100gs, was voted for the purpose of conferring the freedom on General Booth, and it was decided to spend 45 on the purchase of a suitable box and to hand over the balance to the funds of the Salvation Army.

It is understood that General Booth himself desired that the bulk of the money voted should be given to the Salvation Army funds rather than spent on an elaborate casket.

"That would be characteristic of the General," said Colonel Ross to the Daily Mirrer yeaterday.

LAST ROSES OF SUMMER.

Magnificent Specimens on Exhibition at the Horticultural Hall.

Coming from the dull, chilly atmosphere in rainsplashed streets into the Horticultural Hall in Vincent-square yesterday was like walking straight into the midst of a July dhy.

It was the first day of the National Rose Society's autumn slow, and surely the quiern of flowers has never been more welcome or more appreciated.
Rose-culture is a fine art nowadays, for all the favouries in their luscious colourings were blooming as fragrantly as in summer. They were all grown in the open, however, and their pertect shape and shades were perhaps more accentuated, untouched as they were by hot sun.

An Prish firm, Messrs. Alex. Dickson, of Newtownards, won a gold medal for a new seedling rose, Messrs. McGredy, of Portadown, Ireland.

"MILK AND WATER" MEN

Is the Man of To-day a Namby-Pamby Creature P

HIS QUALITIES DISCUSSED.

Numerous letters have been addressed to us on the subject of the striking article in yesterday's Daily Mirror on "milk-and-water" men. From this mass of correspondence we select the follow-

THE LIFE OF EASE.

THE LIFE OF EASE.

I entirely agree with the writer of the article on "milk-and-water" men that the only care of the majority of modern young men is to see how they can obtain the maximum of comfort at the minimum of inconvenience. The clerk who marries with the idea of having a tame "slave" will deprive his wife and children of comforts in order that he may travel second instead of third class to the City. The young labourer desires twice as many luxuries as his father did. Conscription would give such men the very training that they so greatly need.

MEN MORE CHIVALROUS.

MEN MOBE CHIVALROUS.

Does "A Woman" seriously think that the young man of to-day is so physically and morally degenerate that a course of compulsory military service is his only chance of salvation? She accuses him of hopeless effeminacy, of "sickly faddism and self-indulgence." But, as a matter of fact, never have men been more truly "masculine" than at the present. They have a more chivalrous regard for women, they have a finer code of personal honour, and they are quite as ready to encounter hardships, as shown by the Volunteers in South Africa, as their ancestors. Women have no real appreciation of the battle of modern business life, or they would never suggest that the man who, has to earn his livelihood—and what a very small proportion has not—lacks backbone and grit.

Kichmond.

HOW WOULD HOME LIFE FARE?

What is the good of a husband, I should like to ask. "A Woman," writing to-day on "milk-and-water-men," if he is always thirsting for out-of-door pursuits, military and naval training, and continual roughing it, which the writer seems to think are the only pursuits suitable for men?

If all men were like this, what would become of home-life and social life? If everyone were to think as "A Woman," people would never get married at all, for what woman could live with a man who climinated all luxury from his life.

Is it because men are already so fond of out-of-door sports and hardening games, that women have had to take to them, too; and men's absence from home and society is the reason of women's clubs, the modern girl, and such like horrors?

September 26.

EFFEMINACY DENIED

EFFEMINACY DENIED.

The fact that man wears a "flowered dressing-gown" does not prove that he is "self-indulent" nor yet that he is "milk-and-watery."

If one looks back to "Good Queen Beay's glorious days" we shall find, I think, that men were far more effeminate in their dress and self-indulgent in the matter of scents, jewels, and such-like kick-shaws. Yet-one would hardly call these vikings "milk-and-watery."

Had lifts (soft-enshined ories, too, if you prefer if) been invented in the days of those whom your correspondent may consider the hardlest warriors, there can be no doubt that they would have availed themselves of them.

The tliin-chested men of whom your correspondent complains, and whom she watches with dismay at the railway stations, are not the men who have much opportunity of testing the luxuries of "cushioned lifts" and "flowered dressing-gowns." They are thin from worry, from want of food, fresh air, readom from anxiety—these, and these alone, will restore "sons of Anak" to the world.

BAD NEWS FOR CYCLISTS.

All Tyres To Be Dearer Owing to Growing Scarcity of Good Rubber.

There will be no fall in the price of cycle or motor-car-tyres next season, in spite of the hopeful anticipations of riders and drivers.

When the Dunlop patents expired, last November, the manufacturers of other makes of tyres reduced their prices from 25 to 30 per cent, one reason being that they would no longer have to pay royalize to the Dunlop Company.

"The increase will be by about 5 or 10 per cent.

Ladies' coats are also to be tight-fitting to the waist, and with long, full skirts.

Green and brown will still be the prevailing tints for autumn suits, vertical stripes being popular with short men to enhance the impression of height.

MEN HATE TO "CUT A FIGURE."

MEN HATE TO "CUT A FIGURE."
Everybody will be relieved to hear that the blue frockcoat does not find favour; the soberer black is to reign supreme.
"Gentlemen will not adopt any outré fashion," said the editor of the "Tailor and Cutter."
Evening dress for men is to remain unchanged in spite of the efforts that have been made to revive knee-breeches. Well-turned calves are ton rare for those picturesque gamments to become universal.

It is extremely improbable, too, that men will adopt the fashion of wearing diamond brookes in their dress ties. One gentleman, however, was so adomed at the Palace Theatre an ight or two ago. It will be gratifying news to country readers that to be well-dressed in future it will not be essential to have one's clothes made by a London tailor. Since the inauguration of these exhibitions there has been a marked improvement in the work of provincial tailors. This is doubliess partly due to the fact that a fine silver challenge vase is awarded to the maker of the best frock, dress, or morning coat.

UNHAPPY "KAFFIR" MARKET.

Stock Exchange Has Many Shares Which the Public Refuse To Buy.

CAPEL COURT, Tuesday Evening.-The Kaffir market does not seem in a happy plight again. Here we are in the new account, with the market certainly rather flat. There is only one story to account for it, and that is the old one. There is no public taking the shares off the books of the dealers.

The dealers have taken the shares from the finance houses, and now they have nobody to whom to sell them. So the market looks gloomy, and talks about the Chinese giving trouble, and about loans being called in presently, about trouble in Paris, and, in fact, any excuse is good enough except the correct one. There are merely one or two exceptions. Bankets were hoisted to 4:11-6, just as though Mr. Garthwaite had issued a good report.

just as though Mr. Garthwaite had issued a good report.

Other mining sections were perhaps firm for choice where they moved at all. The Etruscan Copper Company issued its report by Mr. Alexander Hill. All he can say for this most farcical of concerns is that, it is still little more than a mining prospect. He recommends further development to prove it one way or the other. Consols are steady, rather with a look of dullness about them. This is because of dear money and Bank-rate talk. The bankers made the Stock Exchange pay § per cent. more for their fortnightly loans this time for the same reason. Newfoundland's 8½ per cent. loan is announced. There was quite a 'good traffic for the South-Eastern and Chatham to-day, and not a bad one for the Great Eastern, but the latter was offset by the accident, though South-Eastern and Chatham stocks were helped by their traffic. The speculative account does not seem to have increased in Home. Rails, which is a good thing.

Americans dull, flat, and upprofitable. Perhaps above the worst, but stiff carry-over rates being exacted, it seems to indicate that a good deal of American speculation is being arranged on this side.

Conper shares are kept rather on the move beside.

Copper shares are kept rather on the move because the metal keeps good, and the Japanese scrip is firm at 5\text{p} premium owing to the coming quotation in Paris. On the whole, though, Paris was inclined to self Foreigners.

Hudson's Bays were a good market, the rise being apparently manipulated, for speculators were charged very stiff carry-over rates.

A RAILWAY PERIL.

HE accident, suicide, murder, or whatever it was, on the railway line near Merstham calls attention again to the fact that the safest way to travel is not to shut oneself up in a perambulating cell, perhaps having for company a murderer or a highwayman who are separated in no way at all. This suits the American temperament, which is happiest in a crowd, with plenty of noise and chatter. It would not suit the English. We have evolved, with the American car as a basis, the corridor train.

But, having evolved it, we hamper its growth. We have not enough corridor trains. We should have nothing else.

'The necessity for the alarm cords, which often fail to work, shows more than anything else the danger of the prison -cell. The inscription above the cords might well read:

"When the passenger opposite to you rushes at you, waving a knife, pull the cord."

These alarm cords are not necessary in corridor trains, as the means of escape from hooligans or robbers is at hand.

There are far too many railway mysteries in England. In America one is killed effectively enough by the railway company, which runs its trains into rivers or into other trains with a Napoleonic disregard of consequences. In this country the person of homicidal appetite can always find food for knife or gun by picking out the right railway carriage and taking care that he and his victim have it to themselves.

AN EXPRESSIVE LANGUAGE.

We wish to thank Mr. George R. Sims in connection with his little play produced at a music-hall. The thanks are offered because he calls his work a "review" instead of a revue."

English is an expressive language—much more expressive than French, and better in every way—to people who know it. But, when a man has only a small knowledge of English he thinks French is better.

The jargon of the theatrical writer includes a lot of foreign words calculated to fill the intelligent man with much pain. For instance, when a person who affects theatres has reached a particularly offensive degree of mental biliousness and physical long-hairedness he uses the word "première" instead of first night. It is an affectation that fatigues all but the morbid.

The Sims play, if it were called a "revue," would give some of these theatrical writers who do not know enough English to express themselves with the opportunity of perpetrating the fiendish combination "première of the revue," and life is sufficiently hard already without that sort of thing.

So Mr. Sims may consider himself publicly thanked for thwarting the theatrical writers, who, no doubt, are tearing their long hair impotent warth.

THIS MORNING'S GOSSIP.

THE King will probably enjoy a good deal of shooting during the quiet days he is spend at Balmoral. His Majesty's at rival in the late Queen's favourite home was a very picturesque affair with its torchlight procession of Highlanders serving as an escort to light him to the Castle. The King cannot be expected to care so much for Balmoral as the late Queen did—on her the place always exercised an almost mysterious fascination, and the patriotic Highlanders used to feel proud of the pleasure which the life there never failed to give the Queen.

In that refreshingly natural and typically feminine journal which Queen Victoria wrote may be found whole pages delicated to the praise of the "dear Place delighted the Queen so was, it need hardly be said, the imprint of the Prince Consort's hand in the decoration of house and grounds. "All has become my dear Albert's own creation," wrote the Queen.

"All has become my dear Albert's own creation," wrote the Queen, "and his great taste has been stamped everywhere." Delightful confidence in "dear Albert's taste! Naive faith in his judgment! To those who look at it more judicially, Balmoral, alast oppears an odd rather than a beautiful place, and to the very severe, indeed, it is nothing less than an architectural nightmare.

and superscription of The Ship. These pleasant "musings without method" had become, even to those (and their name is legion) who never read "Longman's," a kind of institution of which they were dimly aware, as people who never pass the Monument or the Albert Memorial are yet aware that they exist. Like Mr. Sims with his "Mustard and Cress" in the "Referee"; or like the late Mr. Austin, whose place on the "Illustrated London News" has been taken, I see, by Mr. G. K. Chesterfan, Mr. Lang had succeeded in making this "Sign of the Ship" as familiar to the literary world as its eggs and baccon in the morning.

Mr. Lang-is a man with an infinite capacity for taking pains. He writes light causeries for some half a dozen papers, and has made himself a specialist on Scotch history, folklore, primitive customs, and other subjects to which some men give their fives. Besides all this, he has time to give himself to the more or less contemplative pursuit of crystal-gazing, and it may be remembered that he once wrote an article in a grave review on the mystic uses of the crystal, and described how he had seen the mirage of a louse, which he afterwards came to visit, within the magic ball.

have always found them straightforward in their dealings.

The people who are to blame are not the agents or the company, but the insurers themselves.

An insurance company before accepting a proposer asks certain questions, which are plain enough. If the proposer does not answer these truthfully, he is obtaining insurance by misrepresentation, and deserves to lose his premiums. These would-be insurers are not fools, and they know perfectly well that if they told the truth they would not be accepted by the company. Why, then, should they expect their premiums back when they are found out.

Allow me to support the views expressed by "Surgeon" with regard to insurance, "English Style." I do not think his strictures at all too Style." I do not think his strictures at all too strong.

But as to the agent acting for the insuring party I must differ. The agent acts for the company always, but the company often throw him over when a claim matures and refuse to pay. I have known a case where the insuring party pursued the case to the bitter end, got judgment, and the company has multed the agent in the amount and given him instant dismissal.

I met with a similar case quite recently, where the wife insured her husband about four months ago. The agent saw him a fortnight previous to completing the transaction, going about, and apparently healthy. However, he died two weeks ago, and the wife, who had paid regularly each week, sent in her claim, but was met with a non possumus, though the company consented to return all premiums paid.

THE CRUELTY OF STEEL TRAPS.

THE CRUELTY OF STEEL TRAPS.

Will you kindly allow me brief space in your columns to say that I have devised a plan, which succeeds perfectly, for preventing the terrible sufferings of trapped rabbits, viz., by fastening securely a few turns of wire (copper wire is best) round each jaw of an ordinary trap, below the teeth and just where the spring flies up, taking care to leave the teeth a full quarter of an inch open when spring. By this simple means rabbits are caught with equal certainty, but their flesh is never lacerated, nor leg-bone shattered or broken.

I will gladly answer any questions addressed to me on the matter, and a steel trap thus modified can be seen at the offices of the National Canine Defence League, 27, Regent-street, S.W.

"MILK AND WATER MEN."

Writing in the "Daily Mirror," a woman complains that man is becoming nambypamby, and that woman in self-defence is forced to develop masculinity. She seems to think that many men are reverting to the original monkey type, with out, however, retaining the maniness of the monkey. These portraits show the suggested evolution of a monkey to a man and then back again.

It is a strange building—this place of agglome-rated towers, turrets, battlements, and wandering curves. But its faults are, after all, forgotten when one remembers what associations cling about it. It was here that the Empress Frederick became engaged to the late German Emperor, and Queen Victoria, with her love of recalling such red-letter days, of course marked the place where the P. essa had received a sprig of white heather from the Prince. It was here, too, that the Queen heard the news of the death of the Prince Imperial. She went, it will be remembered, from Balmoral to Farnborough to offer her sympathy to the Empress Eugenie in this last and most bitter of her afflictions.

as bad as that! I am not as bad as that!"

She searched the papers again and again, read and re-read the reports, so full of conjecture, so bare of facts. But they added no iota to the knowledge gleaned from the first hasty perusal. Fay Swindover, on her wedding-night, had disappeared, vanished from the castle. She had disappeared as completely as though she had been a wraith, dissolved into mist. For nearly two months the most skilful detectives in the world had been trying to trace her, and as gigantic reward had brought to light no trace of her whereabouts from any quarter of the globe.

Sabra experienced a strange sense of clation. She to light no trace of her whereabouts from any quarter of the globe.

Sabra experienced a strange sense of elation. She could not help it. She knew that it was unreasonable; perhaps it was alony wrong; but it was kuman. An impulse of gratitude went out from her soul to this girl, who was not established as mistress at Balliol, who had not, even for a day, shared the Hife of the man she had married, who had come to the castle like a stranger, and partaken of its hospitolity, and passed out into the night.

With this news a hush fell for the first time on Sabra's fevered spirit. The sense of overwhelming loss remained, but the stinging, racking anguish of personal jealousy was removed.

Dick was eternally lost to her, but he was alone. Perhaps his thoughts already had flown back to her, the woman he had loved, and, conquering his contempt for her treachery, passed over the bridge of glorious memory to meet that great wave of longing that went out from her, beating ceaselessly on the shore of the past. Perhaps, in time, alone in its greatness and splendour, he would forgive her, would, think kindly of her. Perhaps one day, in the dim future—oh, thought of unspeakable, of blinding sweetness!—he would tell her so.

She pulled herself up with a start of terror and shame.

Why did she dare to think such thoughts? What

Why did she dare to think such thoughts? What was he to her? What could he ever be? Why was he assuming that he would always be alone? She adh heard of such strange happenings before. His wife would come back; she was bound to come white would come mask, sac as well, but he was alone now. That was enough. For the present, let that be enough. She rose and stepped out on to the balcony. The sunset glow had long faded; but the last greenish ringe of twilight lingered in the West. The bay was like a sea of oil; a row of cypresses on a distant ridge cut the sky like lances dipped in its.

The bay was like a sea of oil; a row of cypresses on a distant ridge cut the sky like lances dipped in ink.

Sabra leaned her elbows on the stone, and her eyes drank in the beauty of the transformation scene of day and night, and, for the first time, with beauty she drank in a measure of peace, which meant respite from the fret and fever of unavailing longing and regret.

A voice sounded in her ears, very still and faint and bitterly cold, and yet touched with a vast, impersonal kindness, as though it might be Nature herself, in her terrible and all-seeing wisdom, offering what grain of comfort she might to one of her children blindly groping in the dark.

"Have done with all this," the voice said. "Be brave and do things, instead of letting them be done to you. Do you not see what you have done, you foolish child? You have sinned against love, which is one of the eternal laws of life, and you are being punished. You must bear your punishment, and, if it grows not lighter, at least you will grow used to it."

A sudden rush of scalding tears blotted out the scene of peaceful loveliness on which the girl was gazing. They streamed down her face unchecked. She cried like a child, with her face in her hands, and she who sheds tears may be comforted.

There was not very much comfort in the words of the voice that she heard. But it was something to understand. And she was beginning to do that. She had done wrong, no matter what her motives had been. She had done violence to the love that had been given her to glorify her own life, and she had, by her action, forced on another life dross, instead of gold. And she must suffer. Love is a king who suffers to rival, and she had not only given him a rival, birt pulled him from his throne.

But to feel that one is being punished is better than to feel that one is being punished is better than to feel that one is being punished is a now feeling in her heart; it was a very saffeeling in her heart; it was a very saffeeling hus the receipt suffering, while to unmerited they turn

It proved to be a gigantic motor-car, white as the driven snow, with fittings that shone like gold, and monstrously-padded leather cushious of crimson to invite luxurious repose.

In a second manager and clerk were bowing in the doorway and porters buzzed about the spacious Roi description of the English milor, who, especially in foreign lands, always appears to one the carch, was fall and largely built's one could ace that, even through had a space of the space of the suard motor mystery, which, however admiring it may be in a woman, in a man is only custom of the flags of the flags.

The man came quite close to him and dropped his singularly unprepossessing voice to a very low tone.

"Look here," he said, "just tell me this. Have you got a young English lady staying here called Vallence?" Miss Vallence."

The manager looked somewhat disconcerted. A motor-cor, a man as good as misked, and an inquity like this must be looked upon by a hotel official who knows his business with suspicion.

"Don't stard and stare at me as if you were a boiled owl?" growded his interlocutor. "Answer my question. The young lady is a great friend of mine-so is her family. I promised them to look her up, only I'm not quite sure of her hotel. I'm not going to slay here if she's somewhere less. Miss Vallence, man! I st the lady staying here or not?"

"Certainly, sir," answered the manager, who found the explanation satisfactory; if the manner of it was somewhat unconventional. "Paradom my delay in answering your question," he added, beaming on the promising-looking guest, "but at first I did not quite eath the name of the lady you seek. "Certainly Miss Vallence stays here. The lady has a most charmage suite, and I am sure you will find, sir, that we have done all we can to make her comfortable."

"That's all right, then. Now show me some rooms—the best you've got. By the way, got a garage?"

"Yes, sir. It is quite close—but two minutes."

"Yes, sir. It is quite close—but two minutes."
"Oh, well, my man can take the car round."
And thus the English milor' showed himself no true motorist, for such is the subtle distinction that, if he had been, and arrived at the hotel dead beat, which he obviously was not, he would still have driven the car to its quarters before he sought his own.

own.

There was a magnificent suite on the first floor, said the manager, with a splendid view over the Bay, and a private bathroom.

The motorist inspected it, grumbled hugely, and said finally that, if there were nothing better, he supposed it must do.

"Will you dine in your own sitting-room, sir," asked the manager, "or at table "d'hote?".

"Which does Miss Vallence do?" asked the metorist.

asked the manager, "or at table d'hote?"

"Which does Miss Vallence do?" asked the motorist.

"Oh, the English lady, Miss Vallence, takes all her meals in her own room."

"So will I," said the motorist. "And I hope you've got a decent wine list, because I'm simply parched."

"I will send the head waiter to you at once, sir, with the carte and the wine list. And may I have the honour of sending to inform Miss Vallence that you have arrived?"

"Oh, tell her-well, no, it doesn't matter." If a man can be seen to grin through goggles and cap and turned-up collar, the motorist certainly betrayed such mirithful humour. "I'll give her a pleasant little surprise, you know. She doesn't know I'm coming."

The manager retired. The valet, Robins by name, came to arrange things, and was roundly sworn at.

Then there was a knock at the door of the sitting-room, which had more red plush, more gilding, and more painting than Sabra's, and a liveried concierge entered with a bow and a proffered sheet of paper.

"If Monsieur would inscribe his name?"

"Oh, rot!" cried the motorist in his harsh, graing voice.

The concierge understood the expression, if not the exclamation.

"It is the custom, Monsieur. For Monsieur's letters—"

One of the most extraordinary claims ever heard in a court of law has just been decided in America. The lady was so annoyed at the non-arrival of the dresses that she broke off the engagement. The chagrined bridgeroom then sought to recover from the costumier damages on account of the expense he had been put to in preparing for the wedding which never came off. But the Court, not unnaturally, decided against him.

The Desert Cure.

Advocates of the simple life will be gratified to learn of the success of the desert cure in the case of Mr. Mackenzie Wallace, the Lyric tenor. Mr. Wallace was the popular favourite of New York drawing-rooms, but two years ago, while on a visit to The Hague, he lost his voice. Doctors pronounced his case as hopeless. He could never recover health or voice. But Mr. Wallace did not despair. He adopted the simple life treatment and went to sojourn in the desert—the Arizona desert, to be exact. Now he has returned with health and voice restored, and the Arizona desert is to become the "cure" resort of America.

Dread of Interviewers.

Dread of Interviewers.

Dread of the American newspaper reporter is said to be the reason why Lord Rosebery is so mawilling to accept an invitation to visit the United States. That prominent people do find the methods of the American newspaper representative embarrassing is certainly true, and at times the "victim?" retaliates. Recently a lady reporter on a New York newspaper sought an interview with a speiety leader who had proved unusually inaccessible. By passing herself off as a lady's madi she succeeded in reaching the door of the lady's boudoir, and, inserting her foot in the door to prevent its being closed, she began her interview. But, the lady within, exasperated beyond en-durance, violently banged the door to, crushing the interviewer's foot. The lady reporter had to be taken home in a cab, and for a fortnight could only hobble about on crutches.

"Reigning" Mayors,

"Reigning" Mayors.

Some subtle wit has evolved a toast which is said to be enjoying much popularity in Manchester and Salford. It proposes "The Lord Mayor-Elect of Manchester and the Mayor-Elect of Salford," and adds, "May they have a long reign," with particular emphasis on the last word. The "clue" is provided by the word "reign," one of the future chief magistrates being a manufacturer of umbrellas and the other of waterproofs.

Berkshire's "Newmarket."

Borkshire's "Newmarket."

It is not suprising that some enormous fields were seen out yesterday on the inaugural day of the Newbury race meeting, for the course is situated in the very heart of a great colony of training stables. In Berkshire itself and the neighbouring counties of Wiltshire and Hampshire, there are more than fifty of these establishments, all within easy distance of the new course. It is possible that one day Newbury may become only second in importance to Newmarket, the Turf "metropolis."

New Recreation for Girls.

Plenty of village churches have fine peals of bells but lack male ringers, and the "Young Woman" makes the suggestion that in supplying this want the athletic girl could provide herself with a new recreation. "From the point of exercise," says the writer, "it is one of the best things for developing the muscles of the body. In these days when so much is written about the deterioration of the race, the art of bell-iniging surely deserves encouragement. In addition the ringing of the bells gives a great deal of pleasure to other people." As an instance of what girls can do in this direction, it is stated that three of the Misses White, of Basingstoke, who have the reprintation of being the most skeyert female ringers in the kingdom, once heiped their father to ring a peal of "grandistic triples," after minutes.

YOUR NERVES

Facts, Suggestions, and Advice for Those Who Are Run Down and Who Feel Unequal to the Demands of Their Daily Duties.

Are your nerves right? Have you plenty of energy, go, and vigour? Or are you suffering from lack of nerve force and vitality? Do you find that you shrink from responsibility, or that you are wanting in pluck in difficult or trying situations? If so, your work and even your recreation is putting a heavy strain on you and robbing life of its brightness and pleasure. But it will not stop here. The strain on your nerves will at last become intolerable, and nervous breakdown is simply a matter of time.

HOW THE NERVES BECOME DISORDERED

Every moment in the day the body is being worn away, and at the same time it is being constantly renewed, and it is even said that the tissues, bones, muscles, and organs are completely renewed once in every seven years. Physical exertion wears the muscles away, and worry, anxiety, study, and the strain of business life wear away brain and nerve tissue. Obviously, both muscular and nerve tissue needs to be restored by rest and food as fast as it is worn away, and if you are thoroughly healthy and not overworked this goes on automatically. In many cases, however, the exertion, either of body or brain, is too intense or too prolonged, and the result is that the wearing-away process goes on faster than that of replacement. Physical or mental breakdown consequently ensues. This is the simple explanation of the way in which the nervous or muscular system gets out of order, and it is our object here to explain the method by which the nervous system may be renewed and nervous collapse prevented. needs to be restored by rest and food as fast as it is

THE LATEST MODE IN FASHION-ABLE BUTTONS.

Little bell buttons in enamel or old silver grace many of this season's tailor-made costumes. The button of filigree silver is an excellent addition to cloth or shot silk, in dark colours, while silk braidball buttons effectively trim serge suits. For the costume trimmed with green the button to use is made of New Zealand greenstone, shaped like an made of New Zealand greenstone, shaped like an ordinary bone button, the centre pierced with four holes crossed by gold thread, in imitation of the cotton used to secure the bone button.

As for the button par excellence for the musin or silk shirt, it is of white porcelain with a ridged surface like unto pique, if the centre of which gleams a tiny imitation ruby, or a precious stone of some other colour.

Mother-of-Pearl Framed in Gold.

Mother-of-Pearl Framed in Gold.

Very lovely buttons for the adomment of blouses and coats are those of mothersof-pearl, reflecting the tones of the opal, and framed in gold, while many frocks and coats would find their ideal set of buttons in those of dark green nacre. On white cloth coats for coaching or travelling large buttons of black velvet are employed, touches of the velvet occurring elsewhere on the wrap, either as a collar, stole, cuffs, or strappings. Blue or mauve velvet buttons decorate long coats of cloth to match, and for motor-coats the leather button carries all before it.

Hand-Painted Buttons of Wood or Porcelain.

Hand. Painted Buttons of Wood or Porcelain.

The embroidered button is no longer a novelty, but is nevertheless much worn, and appears in a lovely guise when made of pule pisk panne worked over with gold timet thread and white silk. Handpainted buttons of wood or porcelain, and diamend or paste buttons for the beautification of Louis coats, are among the more luxurious fashions.

Crochet buttons will be one of the favourite trimmings for the coming season. The variety is infinite in design and shape, and the material used, whether it be silk, cotton, or linen, is satisfactory and effective.

QUAINT CONCEITS.

Richelieu shoes with small gold buckles upon them are worn a great deal in the evening.

Scarlet reefer with small gold buttons to decorate it is being effectively used for neat little coats.

Grey gloves have become very popular, and, of course, white and cream ones are still among us.

Rose colour is popular for light cloth tailer-made dresses. It is extremely effective when worn with white lingeric blouses.

Odd little Japanese bags are being a great deal seen, and vary in size from tiny purses that just hold a little money to quite imposing-looking hand-

Chiffon taffetas and the supple silks are favourite frock materials. An exquisite dress carried out in chiffon taffetas is of several delicate grey shades, gained by the tiny pin stripes of alternate grey and white fading into each other.

When Sabra had finished her dinner, she went out again on to her balcony.

But she had hardly descended the first little flight of rocky steps beyond the stone balustrade that edged the garden, when she heard her name spoken by an unfamiliar voice.

"Miss Vallence! I say—Miss Vallence!"
Heavy footsteps stamped down the path. Sabra, who had involuntarily stopped, found herself joined by a tail, bulky, young man. Above his immaculate clothes, his face loomed indistinctly in the shadow of the trees. She saw that it was heavy and clean-shaven, and that the lips were parted in a broad and complacent smile.

At first she was nonplussed. Genuinely, she had forgotten him. Then, suddenly, memory, diving back, brought to the surface a certain morning in Stoke Magnus, a crowd round the door of the D'you suppose I'd come to this dead-and-alive hole

She drew her white cloak a little closer about her. "Mr. Swindover," she said, and not the most imaginative person could have translated her tone into enthusiasm.

But the tall, heavily-built young man beamed.

"Yes, it's me, Luther Swindover. I say, Miss Vailence, shake hands! Hang it all, you haven't forgotten that you saved my life!"

"I am astonished to see you," she said, with stiled politeness. "Are you travelling in Italy?".

"Looks like it, eh?" he retorted, with a wink that could be felt through the darkness.

"How did you recognise me?" she asked.

"I didn't recognise you, manuzelle."

"What do you mean?" With every word her voice grew chillier.

"Well, I knew you were here. And, when I saw a white cloak among the trees, I thought it might just as well be young any meeles. So I came out to see the property of the property. The Johanny said it was the best suite they'd got, but, between you and me, it's a hole.

INAUGURATION OF NEWBURY RACES.

Brilliant Sport-Principal Prize Won by Lord Carnarvon's Missovaja.

ENORMOUS FIELDS.

Nawaura, Tuesday Night.—Only one thing was wanted to make the opening of the Newbury raccourse one of the most brilliant events of the present season, and that was a thing beyond the power of mankind to command. I allude to the absence of sunshine, which was wanting to make the scene one of the pretriest to be found any where in the country.

where in the country.

There were tremendous fields for the various races, and the task of picking winners was well-nigh an impossible one, with the result that backers had a bad day.

TRIAL AT NEWMARKET.

R. /Marsh's Flirtaticn (W. Halsey) (1), Andromeda filly (E. Charters) (2), and Gorgos (H. Jones) (3); six furlongs. Won by a length; a bad third.

NEW ZEALANDERS IN LONDON.

The New Zealand team are now at their headquarters, the Manchester Hotel, in Aldersgate-street, where they will stay whenever in London. To-day they leave for Northampton by an afternoon train to play "The Saints" on Thursday.

Northampton by an afternoon train to play "The Saints' on Thurday, men were in fine spirits. They say they have met with the greatest kindness and hospitality ever since they set foot on shore, and were having a right royal time. Except Mr. Dixon, the manager, and two members of the team, none of them manager, and two members of the team, none of them (Lub's ground at Stamford Bridge in running and kicking practice. Being new to England and London, the men had found great interest in their journey to Stamford Bridge, via the tube and electric tram.

The team will not after their methods unless necessary.

YESTERDAY'S RESULT.

LANCASHIRE CUP

PRESTON NORTH END, 3; SOUTHPORT

CENTRAL, 0.

At Southport, yesterday, in glorious weather. The Central, who won the Cup last season, were weakly represented. In the first half Danson scored for Preston, and after the interval he and Maier added further goals. For the most part Preston simply toped with their opponents, who scarcely ever troubled McBride, and they won by 3 to 0.

SPORTING NEWS ITEMS.

A telegram from Newmarket states that there is no change in the condition of Mr. James Waugh. Very big fields were the rule at Newbury yesterday, no fewer than ninety-eight horses contesting the six events.

ENGLISH RUGBY PLAYERS ALARMED.

Will the New Zealanders Alter the "Scrum"?-New Definitions and Changes in the Laws.

FORWARDS OR "WINGERS."

As a natural result of the three remarkable triumphs gained by the New Zealanders, Rugby players in this country are becoming alarmed. They will certainly have in the immediate future, further cause for perturbation to meet our visitors, will go under like the men in the West Country, though possibly the Colonials' backs will not be quite as effective on the enclosure at Franklia's Grounds, which has its own peculiarities.

Leicester on Saturday may put up a beiter fight than their predecessors, but there was nothing in their play against Plymouth last week to suggest they are anything like good enough to beat the New Zealanders. Nor is there any real prospect of Middlesex next week checking them. The Middlesex men will be little better than a scratch lot, and even were they in such good form at the overcame Deron last scene and they overcame Deron last scene. A F. Harding might be able to keep a good watch over the New Zealand winger.

It is a little curious to read the persistent manner in which interviewers of Mr. Dixon, the New Zealand interviewers of Mr. Dixon, the New Zealand intention of his men altering their style, and it is pleasant to read in yesterday's paper that it is proposed to follow the methods that have demonstlated the West Country and startled even our triends in Wales.

If any change takes place it must come from our side, and I notice that Mathias, the Bristol and International forward, is of opinion that we must adopt the 2-3-2 formation for the pack. I must confess I was very much struck with the Solid, business-like look about the New Zealander forwards when they settled down in the New Zealander forwards when they settled down in the pack.

* * * *

I recognise that the New Zealand backs are exceptionally speedy and dangerous, but they have had a free hand and ample scope to display their skill, because their seven forwards, by intelligent scrummaging and packing, have been more than a match for eight opponents, and have thus given the team an extra man outside.

hand and simple scope to display their sem, occause their seven flowards, by intelligent scrimmaging and neuts, and have thus given the team an extra man outside.

Against our 3—3—3 formation in the scrimmage the New Zealand style is underliably effective and possibly superior, even assuming the English forwards to be awell trained and versed in their positions. Then assuming that our men reduce the number in the scrimmage the well trained and versed in their positions. Then assuming that our men reduce the number in the scrimmage and the sufficient, and that hooker No. 2 would be better employed as another winger?

By a process similar to that related in the nursery story of "Ten Little Niggers," there would seem a possibility in the fature of the complete disappearance of the scrimmage and the evolution of forwards into glorified wlugers. What a delightful prospect!

Despite the caustic criticisms by one or two writers it may be assumed that the electrations in the laws approved by the International Board will be adopted at the Rugby Union meeting. It cannot be said that the law happy or, indeed, quite correct.

According to the proposed change, "a drop-kick is made by letting the ball fall from the hands and kicking the proposed by the player kick it so as to constitute a drop-kick—wo fee with the least knowledge of the game it has touched the ground. When, after the ball has from the hands and kicking the player kick it so as to constitute a drop-kick—wo fee with the least knowledge of the game it has touched the ground. When, after the ball has free made to the proposed change, and the player carping the waver that the kicking of the ball ball from the hands and kicking the player kick it so as to constitute a drop-kick. When the hall has have the hall have been made by kicking the ball the flower of supposing it to be possible for a full-back, with the four-tien other men offside, and being mable, to pass to anyone, to be regar—a set of white and the player is not be possible for a full-back, with the f one opponent.

A way of the future any player, in the case of a fair catch or free-kick, may take the kick or place the ball. That is a wise change, as is also the proposed penalising a player for returning the ball with his foot into the arcumange after it has come out. Such an addition to the penalty rules should put a stop to certain tactice that savour of sharp practice and arc of the spirit of the game.
